at the Euclid-avenue Opera House to-day. Its success was immediate, emphatic and continuous. Like all Pinero's later plays it is a subtle and sincere study of feminine nature, more human than anything which has preceded it; more appealing, CHICAGO'S PACE AT THE START TOO and, in a purely theatric sense, more effective. It is finer in character studies and motives than his "Second Mrs. Tanqueray." It was superbly staged and still more superbly acted. Miss Virginia Harned has in the part of "Iris" the strongest and most sympathetic in her career. All the support was excellent, but a towering success was made by Oscar Asche, who came from London to play his original part. A number of prominent theatrical men saw the performance.

Fierce Fight Between Middleweights that Ended in Victory for the Favorite in the Betting.

Ryan began going wickedly fast and swinging a heavy right to Carter's jaw staggered the Kid. They finished the round as if it was the last minute of the bout, both swinging heavily for the head. Ryan took his corner tired and Carter was groggy. Round 3-Ryan put all his force in right over the kidneys and then sparred away. Carter chopped Tommy on the jaw coming out of a clinch. LOUISVILLE, Ky., Sept. 15 .- In his charge to the grand jury to-day Judge Barker, of the criminal division of the Jefferson Circuit Court, referred to the McGovern-Corbett contest scheduled to take place in this city September 22, and after quoting the Kentucky law in the case and defining a prize fight as any fight for a prize. whether a title, bet, wager or stake, he stated that the statute does not prohibit "sparring exhibitions" unless the winner takes something he would not have secured > Continuing, the judge declared: "I have nothing to do with the policy of this law. We have nothing to do with the question as to whether prize fights ought or ought not to be given. We have to do simply with the enforcement of this law, just as we find it on the statute book. I wish to reiterate that any fight at which the winner gets something that he would not have got if he had not been declared the victor, whether large or small in amount, is a prize fight; otherwise not. A fight for a championship, or for a belt, or for money, or anything of value, in my opinion, is a prize fight. As to this particular prize fight or fight, whatever it is called. I understand that the police authorities have it in their charge and that the mayor has said that there should be no violation of the law. I want to say to you that I have every confidence in what the mayor says, and I believe that he, having given that word, will see to it that there will be no violation of the law, but if that is not so (and I have no question of its truth), then it will be your duty, should you conclude to take it up, or the duty of the next grand jury, to take the matter in hand." Attorney General Pratt arrived here tonight from Frankfort and will to-morrow file an injunction suit, in accordance with Governor Beckham's instructions, to determine the status of the contest. Commercial Bowling League.

Those interested in the organization of the Commercial Bowling League met at the Pastime alleys last night and accepted the constitution and by-laws prepared by Cliff Allen. Six clubs are now formed as members of this league, and at the meeting to be held Thursday evening it will be decided whether to have an eight-club organization. In case two more clubs are added the Pastime and City Club alleys will be used, but if the league is composed of only six clubs all the games will be played at the Pastime alleys. The schedule will be arranged at Thursday night's meeting. STORIES NOT EXAGGERATED.

Explorer De Windt's Narrative of Hardships and Suffering.

New York Times. Harry De Windt, the famous traveler, who started from Paris on Dec. 19, 1901 for a long, roundabout journey to New York for the purpose of investigating the possibility of building a railroad between and registered at the Imperial Hotel, Although Mr. De Windt related almost incredible hardships which he had suffered and declared emphatically that he had just completed the worst journey of his life, the explorer discovered on reaching New York that he had lost only ten pounds.

Mr. De Windt said that in 1900 Prince Khilkoff had assured him half laughingly that if he ever succeeded in making the crossing, the prince would see to it that stretch he beat out Prince Direct by half a | the perils and trials which he has under-Since arrangements were completed for length. He won the final heat with quite a gone since he left Paris, 248 days ago. The post houses were forty miles apart, and all our nourishment was black bread and water. But that was only a tithe of the troubles to come. "It took five months to reach Verkoyansk an exile settlement, where we spent two months. From there we journeyed in a northeasterly direction 1,400 miles to Srednipolymsk, and of this place I can give no adequate description. The worst stories which have ever been told or written of the life led by the exiles in the uttermost wilds of Siberia would form no exaggeration of what exists in this place. Suffice it to say that no convict, no matter how hardy, ever lives more than four or five years. Mail or news of the civilized world arrives once a year. The man or woman who goes to this settlement as a prisoner is as certainly dead to the world as though ascending the scaffold, We ran out of food here and suffered horribly. Finally, at the end of the two months, we secured dog teams and started through the Tchukchi country for Bering strait. We were expecting to come upon a settlement at every hundred miles, but we drove on and on through the blinding snow for 500 miles. And then we came upon wretched hut, where the mercury appalled

"At the end of seven weeks we reached Bering strait, and thought that the future could bring us nothing worse than the hardships we had already encountered. At this point we lived for several weeks with the filthiest people in the world. Our food was seal and walrus meat, and we were glad to get that. "Finally the government cutter Thetis called by order of the government and took us off. About five miles from Cape Prince of Wales we left the ship and started for land on ice which was moving at the rate of four miles an hour. It took us six long hours to traverse those five miles of ice. We stayed some time at Cape Prince of Wales and then left for Cape Nome, where we stayed four days and which I want to say is as civilized in its customs and laws as the city of New York. We then travelled to Seattle and came as directly as possible on to New York. "As to the possibilities of the passage for railroad travel, I am much more firmly convinced than I hoped to be. I fully be-lieve that the road will be completed and in across and twenty-three fathoms deep, and the soil is most favorable. "Regarding ventilation, the three Dio-mede islands, in close proximity, are in such a position that they can be tunneled to provide perfect ventilation.

During M. De Windt's narration a drink was placed before him in which a piece of ice clinked pleasantly against the sides of the glass. "Take it away, please," said M. De Windt. "Take it and bring me something without any ice in it. I've had enough of that substance to satisfy me all my life. Included in the traveler's party was Vi-comte De Bellegarde, who did not stand to Seattle he suffered agonies with frozen feet and was compelled to leave the Three Russian servants who started out with M. De Windt as soon as he reached Siberia deserted him when only a portion of the distance had been accomplished, influenced by their fear of some of the wild natives they expected to meet further on.
